

Types of lingerie

Soft Cup:

This bra is soft with no wires and is very comfortable.

Underwired:

This type of bra has shaped wires under cups of the garment, which gives both great shape and lift to the breasts.

Full Cup:

Larger breasted women tend to choose this type of cup as it gives maximum support. A great day to day style. The breasts are encased in the cups giving a greater feeling of confidence that they are not going to spill out.

Plunge:

The cup on this style is cut diagonally, creating a “V” appearance at the front. It is more revealing, showing more cleavage. Good for wearing under party wear as they tend to be lower cut.

Balcony/Balconnet:

This style of bra creates, as it implies, a balcony where the breasts are “upfront and proud”. Ideal for wearing under lower cut tops.

Strapless/Multiway:

Many strapless bras now come as “multiway” which gives the garment added functionality of being worn with straps usually invisible or worn with straps in a halter neck position, which is great for shoulder-less summer tops.

Knickers

Briefs:

This style gives full coverage of the bottom, coverage at the front up to just below the belly button region and good coverage at the sides.

French Knickers:

Were traditionally made from silk, A loose and floaty style. Very sexy undies!

Thong/G string:

These are very much a personal preference!
The Thong has a triangular piece of material at the back reducing to a narrower strip of material.
The G-string is skimpier and has less material all round.
Both are fine if your bottom is firm and cellulite free!

Shorts:

These tend to be a more masculine style of pants, which are usually cut longer on the leg.

Full:

Traditional cover all areas, great belly warmers!
They may not be sexy but for practical day-to-day wear they're a winner. For those who don't quite need Control / Support wear.

Control/Support:

These are very personal to a woman. They are not bedroom attire at all! They are functional for holding everything in, creating contours and streamlining a woman's figure under the little black dress on special occasions.
